Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 26 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain for a time, then turning chilly with blustery showers.

Today:
Band of heavy rain spreading eastwards across remaining areas. Sunshine and scattered blustery showers following, showers heavy with hail in west and turning wintry at times over hills. Turning colder.

Tonight:
Clear spells but blustery wintry showers almost anywhere, least frequent in south and east, some snow accumulations on W and N hills. Frost for many, with ice risk in northwest.

Saturday:
Showers easing through the morning, most places becoming dry with sunny spells. Thicker cloud and outbreaks of rain spreading to the northwest later. Breezy with coastal gales in northwest later.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Cloudy and windy with persistent rain across many western hills Wales northwards. Mostly dry across the south and increasingly warm. Windy with gales across many coasts and hills, easing Tuesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.